Market Case Study

As Lawyer Faces Trial in Wiretap Case, Others Advised to Watch

Experts see a lesson for the legal profession in the criminal case against a Los Angeles lawyer accused of paying private investigator Anthony Pellicano to wiretap a client's ex-wife...

...Mark Mermelstein, of counsel to the Los Angeles office of Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe, said the case shows the need to supervise investigators.

“You can’t just let your investigator go out there and investigate and take the fruits of what he provides and use it,” he told the National Law Journal. “As a lawyer, you really need to be on top of what your investigator is doing, and how your investigator is gathering information, to make sure your investigator is not running afoul of the law.”
