Education

The Mankind Project (MKP) is a non-profit organization that trains men in the values of Authenticity, Integrity, Accountability, Tolerance and Service. Led two pro bono consulting projects (a team of five and a team of six Stanford GSB alumni) to help this non-profit corporation better define its mission and attract additional resources to fund its operations. Then personally traveled to 24 cities to present the findings and recommendations to MKP's chapters. Ultimately convinced all 35 separate 501(c)(3) corporations to merge into a single corporation, which the Chairman has credited for the organization's continued survival.
