ClearingBid provides an entirely new application of technology to expand access for potentially millions of investors interested in new security issues while engaging the participation of the broader, broker-dealer community. ClearingBid's order routing system employs many of the same principles identical to how securities are offered and traded in well-functioning secondary markets using existing protocols while increasing transparency and applying its proprietary price discovery and order demand authentication methods. Orders from investors are collected seamlessly and placed in a time/price priority orderbook, in which order quantities and prices can be made visible to all, while providing all investors the opportunity to participate.
