About:

Erin Leonard founded Erin Leonard Events (ELE) in 2019 with a belief that events are rare opportunities to step out of our busy lives to grow, learn, reflect, and develop lasting connections. Based in Washington D.C., Erin and her team design unique, engaging events that are as fun to plan as they are to attend. Just ask the thousands who have been touched by her work.

This woman-led team includes six remote, full-time contractors, many of whom come from backgrounds in theatrical stage management, allowing ELE to excel in both technical production and creative design. In addition to planning and producing events, ELE is an experiential marketing firm that offers strategic consulting, as well as website content and design, social media marketing, google ads, and all things digital marketing. They’re working to push the boundaries of “events” with AR/ VR, asynchronous and synchronous courses,

The pandemic, despite all the hardships and pain it caused, actually became an incredible opportunity for ELE, as the team pivoted quickly to producing virtual events, including moving a 2,000 person conference, that featured Stacey Abrams, to an online event in less than a week. Similarly, they transformed the National Charter Schools Conference from an in-person to a virtual event with tenacity and efficiency. The word about ELE’s expertise in running smooth hybrid and virtual events has grown!

In 2021, ELE is continuing to grow and planning in-person events once again, while still offering virtual and hybrid experiences to increase accessibility and reach. Erin Leonard Events sets themselves apart by creating full experiences, both before, during, and after events to get participants engaged and deliver meaningful results to their clients.
