TARGET MARKET

Target market segmentation was chosen along two primary demographic parameters: population of legal drinking age and household income per year. To a lesser extent data based on highest level of education completed, race, and gender were studied.

All of the information on the demographics and psychographics for the area were very encouraging. The statistics for the radius of 5th Element Brewing's desired location in Old Town Leander. Here is a quick summary:

Currently 41,424 people or 64.19% of the total population of 64,528 are of legal drinking age. The population in the 25-64 age range were almost entirely younger people, which means they will eventually be included in the population of legal drinking individuals.

According to the trade organization, the Brewers Association, the primary subset of the population that patronize brewery establishments is college educated, white males, age 25-45, that earn between $25k - $150k per year in income. As the baby boomers and women and minorities continues to grow, their numbers lag behind the above. Approximately 80% of the population is most likely to patronize the brewery.

5th Element Brewing was established in April, 2017. Accordingly, there are limited financial statements and When evaluating this investment opportunity, investors should consider factors outlined in the risk section

Risk Factors

You Might Lose Your Money

When you buy a certificate of deposit from a bank, the Federal government (through the FDIC) guarantees a Note is not like that at all. The ability of 5th Element Brewing to make the payments you expect, and ultimately depends on a number of factors, including many beyond our control.

Limited Services

5th Element Brewing operates with a very limited scope, offering only particular services to potential clients in customer preferences.

Lack of Accounting Controls

Larger companies typically have in place strict accounting controls. Smaller companies typically lack these additional risk.

Inability to Sell Your Investment

The law prohibits you from selling your securities (except in certain very limited circumstances) for 12 months after that one-year period, a host of Federal and State securities laws may limit or restrict your ability to sell your securities. If you want to sell, you will likely have difficulty finding a buyer because there will be no established market. Given the nature of the investment, you should hold your investment for its full term.

The Company Might Need More Capital

5th Element Brewing might need to raise more capital in the future to fund/expand operations, buy property, hire new members, market its services, pay overhead and general administrative expenses, or a variety of other reasons. There is no assurance that additional capital will be available when needed, or that it will be available on terms that are not adverse to 5th Element Brewing. If 5th Element Brewing is unable to obtain additional funding when needed, it could be forced to delay its business operations or altogether.

Changes in Economic Conditions Could Hurt 5th Element Brewing

Factors like global or national economic recessions, changes in interest rates, changes in credit markets, changes in consumer spending, declining employment, changes in real estate values, changes in tax policy, changes in political conditions, and other factors are unpredictable and could negatively affect 5th Element Brewing's financial performance. If 5th Element Brewing ceases operations due to the foregoing factors, it can not guarantee that it will generate revenue in the future.

No Registration Under Securities Laws

The Notes will not be registered with the SEC or the securities regulator of any State. Hence, neither 5th Element Brewing nor the Notes are subject to the same degree of regulation and scrutiny as if they were registered.

Incomplete Offering Information

Title III does not require us to provide you with all the information that would be required in some other kind of public offering of shares (for example, publicly-traded firms must generally provide investors with quarterly financial statements that have been audited by an independent accounting firm). Although Title III does require extensive information, you should make a different decision if you had more information.

Lack of Ongoing Information

5th Element Brewing will be required to provide some information to investors for at least 12 months following the offering. This information is far more limited than the information that would be required of a publicly-reporting company. 5th Element Brewing may stop providing annual information in certain circumstances.

If 5th Element Brewing needs more capital in the future and takes on additional debt or other sources of financing, you may have rights superior to yours. For example, they might have the right to be paid before you are, to receive larger dividends, to have a seat in management, or otherwise.

The Company is Not Subject to the Corporate Governance Requirements of the National Securities Exchange Act

Any company whose securities are listed on a national stock exchange (for example, the New York Stock Exchange) is subject to rules about corporate governance that are intended to protect investors. For example, the major U.S. stock exchanges require a company to have an audit committee made up entirely of independent members of the board of directors (i.e., directors with no material relationships with 5th Element Brewing or management), which is responsible for monitoring 5th Element Brewing's financial reporting. 5th Element Brewing will not be required to implement these and other investor protections.

You Have a Limited Upside

Notes include a maximum amount you can receive. You cannot receive more than that even if 5th Element Brewing becomes more successful than your initial expectations.

You Do Have a Downside

Conversely, if 5th Element Brewing fails to generate enough revenue, you could lose some or all of your money.

Payments and Return Are Unpredictable

Because your payments are based on the revenue of 5th Element Brewing, and the revenue of 5th Element Brewing can disappear altogether) unpredictably, it is impossible to predict how much you will receive and when. And because the revenue is unpredictable, so is your ultimate return.

The Notes Are Unsecured and Uninsured

The Notes are not secured by any collateral, nor are they guaranteed or insured by the FDIC or any other entity.

Subordination

The Notes shall be subordinated to all indebtedness of 5th Element Brewing to banks, commercial finance companies, and other financing institutions, and/or other institutions regularly engaged in the business of lending money.

Lack of Guaranty

The Notes are not personally guaranteed by any of the founders or any other person.

Limitation of Individual Rights in Event of Default
