Filippo Marino

Founder, CEO at Safe-esteem
Miami

Summary

With 30 years of experience across the public and private sectors, Filippo enjoys exploring the cultural and psychological dimensions impacting the perception and management of risk and resilience, and helping corporate executives, decision-makers, and complex organizations design effective mitigation strategies.

Over the course of his career, Filippo developed, led or optimized security, intelligence and risk mitigation operations as both an adviser and functional leader. His career started as an officer of the Italian Army and spanned across organizational and cultural boundaries, serving as a successful consultant to Fortune 500 companies and High Net-Worth individuals.

Filippo authored several guidelines, operational frameworks and patented business models adopted across the corporate intelligence and protective security industries. In his most recent corporate role, he developed and managed McDonald's Global Risk Intelligence & Executive Protection operations. Filippo also led the brand's initiatives and best practices in the areas of Workplace Violence Prevention, Crisis Management, and major events security, including Olympic Games and FIFA World Cup. He holds a Magna Cum Laude B. A. degree in Behavioral Sciences.
