LaLa Gardens Cooperative, LCA

A Demonstration Garden, Artist Residency &
A Hub for Regenerative Applications of Web3 Technology

What Is LaLa Gardens?

LaLa Gardens is a one-acre garden and Limited Cooperative Association in Fort Collins, CO, functioning as a living model for regenerative urban gardening.

Engaged through playful stewardship, balanced relationships, experiential learning and the application of natural law, we shift from an exploitative paradigm into one of reciprocity, successional evolution, abundance, and inter-relationship with the natural world and with each other.

Our focus is developing a catalyst hub for regeneration with welcoming, fun, and functional experiences that make any community we call home interconnected as an ecosystem.

Why Is It Important?

Supporting natural systems of regeneration and redundancy is the avenue by which we come to understand our place within these systems, offering us a key to nothing less than the gate to abundant gardens, starting here at LaLa Gardens.

Practicing cooperative values together gives visibility to the process of stewarding a regenerative place, while implementing and catalyzing cultural shifts towards thriving.

Using Web3 technology to support cooperative living, natural farming, decentralized governance and finance, and systems that reward contributors driving impact, LaLa Gardens shows rooted application of regenerative practices.
