“The premise of a movie is its #1 selling point and there are two categories of movies that always seem to find an audience: horror and thriller. The ‘sitting-on-the-edge-of-your-seat’ thriller that is FINAL INTERVIEW had its first trial run as a stage play with raving reviews and was even featured in the LA Times. Actor, director, and writer Gabriel Oliva has the knowledge, expertise, and connections to bring this exciting tale to life for a wider audience, and it’s a pleasure to be a part ...”

Perfectly intense. Fun roller coaster that took us through laughter and gasps and a few tears. Smart and thoughtful and absolutely loved it. I immediately was telling friends they needed to see it.

This was a rollercoaster of a tension build while exploring greed, grief, and mental health, with a big pay off at the end. I was riveted by the performances of both lead actors as they made me think, made me laugh, and made me cry. Gabriel Oliva...continued

The Final Interview is an intense dish of revenge not served cold. As you watch you may know from the poster this is not going to go well for anyone, but the road there is not a straight one. The terrain went from tranquil to treacherous and once the pedal was punched to the floor it was never let go. I grabbed the rail next to me to help my body cope with the intensity.

Title: Final Interview

Genre: Thriller

Format: Feature Film, based on the critically acclaimed stage play

Rating: R

Runtime: 87 Minutes

Logline: A successful business mogul interviews for a job but his answers will actually determine whether he lives or dies.

SYNOPSIS

Neurotic engineer Clayton Hill arrives at a high rise corner office to interview for one of the world's biggest construction firms. His interviewer enters, Charles Gibson, a supremely confident executive with a million dollar smile. As the interview progresses, Clayton's off-putting humor makes Charles end the interview prematurely. Just as Charles escorts this weirdo out of his office, Clayton pulls out of a gun.

He wants to interview Charles now: not for a job... but for his life.

As this reverse interview gets under way, Clayton reveals he knows every dirty secret about Charles and if he doesn't answer his questions honestly, Clayton will most definitely put a bullet in him. Charles uses every sly negotiating tactic at his disposal to get out of this situation alive but Clayton isn't fooled. It turns out 7 years prior, Charles was secretly responsible for the collapse of a condominium which killed 92 people, 1 on whom was Clayton's pregnant fiancé.

Charles manages to instill doubt in Clayton's plan by convincing him that his fiancé might have survived all those years ago. Now it's a desperate game of cat and mouse as Clayton tries to uncover the truth and Charles tries to keep his life.

Clayton Hill

Mid 30s, mildly nerdy with a fidgety energy that is particular to a mind computing on overdrive. Behind his unsettling sense of humor lies an ocean of pain from the trauma of a great loss 7 years ago. He oscillates quickly back and forth from self-deprecating smiles to vicious outbursts. He embodies what most others fear: someone with nothing to lose.

Charles Gibson

50s, his power tie matched perfectly with a million dollar smile. Charles could easily have been a congressman. He exudes the affable air of a man who's always been in control. Charles' corporate sheen will be suddenly wiped away when challenged by the most dangerous adversary he's ever encountered. His silver tongue may not be enough to escape his ultimate test.

Tessa Burke

late 20s/early 30s. Administrative assistant to Charles. Tessa is bubbly but not sickeningly so. She's naturally organized and attentive to Charles' needs.

Charles needs, so much so that she unknowingly escalates the dire situation unfolding right underneath her nose.
