Founder & CEO of Ayeya / Founder of Alaffia
Greater Seattle Area

Summary

Olowo-n'djo: The path connector

Armed with an understanding of sustainable business ideologies and an unwavering dedication to improve the standards of living in West African communities, Olowo-n'djo founded Alaffia in 2004 and Ayeya in 2022, providing a path towards poverty alleviation and gender equality through the fair trade of African resources.

Born and raised in poverty in Togo, West Africa. Inspired by his mother, who instilled in him the importance of community. Ten years after dropping out of school, Olowo-n'djo earned a bachelor's degree in organizational theory from the University of California.

While studying, he felt the yearning to help improve the way of life for the communities like his home village by providing a more sustainable and equitable future.

He fights the injustices he faced and witnessed, including gender inequality and poverty in West Africa through sustainable health care, education and environmental initiatives.
