Claire Marsh

Product leader and new venture builder
Los Angeles, California, United States

Summary

I thrive on solving complex problems—especially those that improve the human condition at scale.

With a dual Master’s in Business Administration and Design Innovation from Kellogg and McCormick at Northwestern, I’ve helped global organizations and startups alike bridge strategy, technology, and storytelling to deliver sustainable, people-centered innovation. My approach blends systems thinking with human-centered design, driven by the belief that real progress is built on empathy, intentionality, and deep respect for lived experience.

Currently building something new at the intersection of women’s health, sports performance, and personalized nutrition. We’re focused on helping active women better understand—and fuel—their bodies through every chapter of life.
