Summary

As a leader who seeks to shape organizations to habitually deliver excellence, I find the most satisfaction in training and implementing processes that allow my team do well without my direct and constant oversight . My management style is as follows; train, equip, empower, focus, retrain, to dominate the competition.

I believe in gaining commitments from front line employees on the “one thing” that they themselves can control to drive the team closer to its goal, and then fostering an environment where employees are accountable to one another for keeping those commitments. This 4DX / OKR management style empowers and energizes the front line to bring impactful change directly to their interactions with our products and customers on a daily basis.

We have a quality product at FCBH, so I'm not interested in reinventing that. I am however interested in constantly fine tuning our “machinery” to deliver that product in the most efficient and effective way possible each and every time.

I would love to share a copy of my book with you for free in blog form or a marketplace copy on Kindle, Amazon, and Audible
