Summary

I started PetSkyNook because of my two cats. Like a lot of indoor pets, they spent their days at the window, watching birds and soaking up the sun through the glass. Most people in apartments can’t build a catio, and an open window isn’t safe, so I designed something better.PetSkyNook is a fully enclosed balcony that installs right in a standard window. There’s no drilling into exterior walls, so it works for renters. It has a clear roof with a sliding sunshade, bars backed by insect mesh, and a cushioned floor. It’s made for cats, dogs, snakes, iguanas, birds and any pet up to 30 lb.I took it from CAD drawings to a working prototype that’s installed in my own New York apartment window and tested by my two cats. Next up is the Global Pet Expo in March 2027 to meet retailers and distributors.If you love pets, work in the pet industry, or want to follow along as we launch, I’d love to connect.
